Abstract

A successful business has been associated with work ethics. It is a set of values based on the ideals of discipline and hard work. This qualitative research tackles the influence of work ethics to the envisioned success of a business. The employees of a well-known milktea shop in Poblacion Hagonoy, Bulacan served as the participants of the study. The participants are selected through convenience sampling. Data were collected with the means of face-to-face interview and by the use of validated interview guide questions which contains 16 items. The researchers collected data from the participants to share their beliefs, opinions and perceptions that served as concrete foundation of the study. The study concluded that the work ethics of employee has an influence to the success of the business. Thus, the statements given by the participants proved that work ethics is one of the reasons why business is deemed successful.
